Confessions Neurasthenic William Taylor Marrs:

Confessions of a Neurasthenic William Taylor Marrs, 2015-05-05 The author has used his best efforts to tell his story in a happy vein without padding and a multiplicity of words The writing of it has been a task well mixed with pleasure the latter of which it is hoped the reader may in some small measure share The suggestions that are intended to be conveyed project between the lines and therefore need no pointing out

Confessions of a Neurasthenic William Taylor Marrs, 2019-12-20 In Confessions of a Neurasthenic William Taylor Marrs presents an incisive exploration of the psychological afflictions that characterized late 19th century America particularly neurasthenia a term used to describe a range of mental and physical symptoms often attributed to the rapid industrialization of society Through a unique blend of autobiographical narrative and psychological examination Marrs delves into the nuances of his own experiences with fatigue anxiety and societal pressures employing a style that is both candid and reflective His use of vivid imagery and relatable anecdotes sheds light on the broader cultural malaise that pervaded the era situating his personal struggles within the Gothic tradition of the time while advocating for a deeper understanding of mental health issues that transcends mere medical definitions William Taylor Marrs a prominent figure in the realm of American literature was himself no stranger to psychological turmoil His background in psychology and literature informs his insightful portrayal of neurasthenia as he grapples with the expectations of masculinity and the demands of a rapidly changing society His intimate engagement with the subject matter reflects a broader societal angst allowing him to resonate with readers facing similar existential dilemmas in their own lives I highly recommend Confessions of a Neurasthenic to those interested in the intersection of psychology and literature as well as anyone seeking to comprehend the complexities of mental health within historical contexts Marrs's articulate and poignant reflections invite readers to challenge conventional perceptions of wellness making this work a compelling and enlightening read

Confessions of a Neurasthenic William Taylor Marrs, 2018-07-30 Confessions of a Neurasthenic By William Taylor Marrs A few weeks later I chanced to see a sleight of hand performance and I at once decided that the art of legerdemain would be more easily learned than the Gospel work so I began to practice along this line by extracting potatoes and other sundries from the nasal appendages of members of the household I was succeeding admirably I thought until one day in attempting to eat cotton and blow fire out of my mouth I burnt my tongue painfully and became so disgusted that I abandoned the idea of becoming a showman In turn I had fully made up my mind to become a huckster an auctioneer a scissors grinder a peanut vender an editor an artist a book keeper etc My natural selection being always something that I thought would not require great energy We are delighted to publish this classic book as part of our extensive Classic Library collection Many of the books in our collection have been out of print for decades and therefore have not been accessible to the general public The aim of our publishing program is to facilitate rapid access to this vast reservoir of literature and our view is that this is a significant literary work which deserves to be brought back into print after many decades The contents of the vast majority of titles in the Classic Library have been scanned from the original works To ensure a high quality product each title has been meticulously hand curated by our staff Our philosophy has been guided by a desire to provide the reader with a book that is as close as possible to ownership of the original work We hope that you will enjoy this wonderful classic work and that for you it becomes an enriching experience

The collection is divided into three parts to address the practices of Whiteness in modernist studies Aesthetics Intersectionality and Inter disciplinary Practice We begin with aesthetics because modernism is the aesthetic produced in dynamic relation to the cultural formations of modernity perceived rapid changes in labor transportation technology and perceptions of body mind and even character Essays in this section examine how the production of Whiteness is baked in as a positive value in assessing the value of cultural production The second section focuses on the embodiment of Whiteness primarily through the gendered and racialized female body as a deflective practice that unmarks Whiteness while making it central to cultural crises around morality national borders and futurity The third section considers the tacit prioritization of Whiteness as a positive value through institutional structures and pedagogical practice these case studies ruminate on the generative potential of isolating and marking these effects In each essay scholars examine the stakes of marking Whiteness as a category of analysis distinct from yet wholly imbricated with racial categorization given the potential for reification inherent in all strategies of marking
