(Pages 30-33-34)

Why do you think people come into a country?

The movement to settle Jews in Palestine began in the late 1800s and early 1900s. These Jews believed that Palestine belonged to their ancestors all over their home 3,000 years ago. But Muslims had lived there for the last 1,000 years.

After World War I, Britain took control of the area. The British found that Jews and Muslims did not live together peacefully. In 1917, Britain made it supported the establishment of a Jewish national homeland in Palestine. This statement is known as the Balfour Declaration.

After World War II, the British left the area. The United Nations divided the land into two parts. One part was set aside for the Palestinians, the other for Jews.

Some countries voted against the plan. The Palestinians opposed it. Many countries feared the idea of a separate Jewish state. They wanted to help make up for the suffering Jews had experienced in World War II. On May 14, 1948, the Jewish people in Palestine declared the existence of the Jewish state of Israel.
