Comparison of registered and published outcomes in randomized controlled trials: a systematic review

Christopher W. Jones^{1*}, Lukas G. Keil², Wesley C. Holland³, Melissa C. Caughey⁴ and Timothy F. Platts-Mills⁵

Abstract

Background: Clinical trial registries can improve the validity of trial results by facilitating comparisons between prospectively planned and reported outcomes. Previous reports on the frequency of planned and reported outcome inconsistencies have reported widely discrepant results. It is unknown whether these discrepancies are due to differences between the included trials, or to methodological differences between studies. We aimed to systematically review the prevalence and nature of discrepancies between registered and published outcomes among clinical trials.

Methods: We searched MEDLINE via PubMed, EMBASE, and CINAHL, and checked references of included publications to identify studies that compared trial outcomes as documented in a publicly accessible clinical trials registry with published trial outcomes. Two authors independently selected eligible studies and performed data extraction. We present summary data rather than pooled analyses owing to methodological heterogeneity among the included studies.

Results: Twenty-seven studies were eligible for inclusion. The overall risk of bias among included studies was moderate to high. These studies assessed outcome agreement for a median of 65 individual trials (interquartile range [IQR] 25–110). The median proportion of trials with an identified discrepancy between the registered and published primary outcome was 31 %; substantial variability in the prevalence of these primary outcome discrepancies was observed among the included studies (range 0 % (0/66) to 100 % (1/1), IQR 17–45 %). We found less variability within the subset of studies that assessed the agreement between prospectively registered outcomes and published outcomes, among which the median observed discrepancy rate was 41 % (range 30 % (13/43) to 100 % (1/1), IQR 33–48 %). The nature of observed primary outcome discrepancies also varied substantially between included studies. Among the studies providing detailed descriptions of these outcome discrepancies, a median of 13 % of trials introduced a new, unregistered outcome in the published manuscript (IQR 5–16 %).

Conclusions: Discrepancies between registered and published outcomes of clinical trials are common regardless of funding mechanism or the journals in which they are published. Consistent reporting of prospectively defined outcomes and consistent utilization of registry data during the peer review process may improve the validity of clinical trial publications.

Opportunities for Organ Donor

Intervention Research National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Health and Medicine Division, Board on Health Sciences Policy, Committee on Issues in Organ Donor Intervention Research, 2018-01-21 The organ donation and transplantation system strives to honor the gift of donated organs by fully using those organs to save and improve the quality of the lives of their recipients However there are not enough donated organs to meet the demand and some donated organs may not be recovered some recovered organs may not be transplanted and some transplanted organs may not function adequately Organ donor intervention research can test and assess interventions e.g. medications devices and donor management protocols to maintain or improve organ quality prior to during and following transplantation The intervention is administered either while the organ is still in the deceased donor or after it is recovered from the donor but before it is transplanted into a recipient Organ donor intervention research presents new challenges to the organ donation and transplantation community because of ethical questions about who should be considered a human subject in a research study whose permission and oversight are needed and how to ensure that such research does not threaten the equitable distribution of a scarce and valuable resource Opportunities for Organ Donor Intervention Research focuses on the ethical legal regulatory policy and organizational issues relevant to the conduct of research in the United States involving deceased organ donors This report provides recommendations for how to conduct organ donor intervention research in a manner that maintains high ethical standards that ensures dignity and respect for deceased organ donors and their families that provides transparency and information for transplant candidates who might receive a research organ and that supports and sustains the public's trust in the process of organ donation and transplantation

Methods and Biostatistics in Oncology Raphael. L.C Araújo,Rachel P. Riechelmann,2018-04-16 This book introduces and discusses the most important aspects of clinical research methods and biostatistics for oncologists pursuing a tailor made and practical approach Evidence based medicine EBM has been in vogue in the last few decades particularly in rapidly advancing fields such as oncology This approach has been used to support decision making processes worldwide sparking new clinical research and guidelines on clinical and surgical oncology Clinical oncology research has many peculiarities including specific study endpoints a special focus on survival analyses and a unique perspective on EBM However during medical studies and in general practice these topics are barely taught Moreover even when EBM and clinical cancer research are discussed they are presented in a theoretical fashion mostly focused on formulas and numbers rather than on clinical application for a proper literature appraisal Addressing that gap this book discusses more practical aspects of clinical research and biostatistics in oncology instead of relying only on mathematical formulas and theoretical considerations Methods and Biostatistics in Oncology will help readers develop the skills they need to understand the use of research on everyday oncology clinical practice for study design and interpretation as well to demystify the use of EBM in oncology

Comparative Effectiveness Research Carol M. Ashton,Nelda P. Wray,2013-06-03 For all its costs flaws and inequities American health care is fundamentally rooted in a belief that treatment should be based on solid scientific research To this end between 2003 and 2010 three different federal laws were enacted the most recent being the Affordable Care Act of 2010 that mandated new federal investments in a type of clinical research called comparative effectiveness research CER research into what works best in medical care Comparative Effectiveness Research Evidence Medicine and Policy provides the first complete account of how and why the federal government decided to make CER an important feature of health reform Despite earlier legislative uptake of policy proposals on CER support for federal mandates took dramatic twists and turns with eventual compromises forged amid failing bipartisan alliances special interests and mobilized public opinion Based on exhaustive research and first hand interviews the authors examine where CER fits in the production of scientific evidence about the benefits and harms of treatments for human diseases and conditions Their work offers sobering confirmation that contemporary American medical care falls not surprisingly well short of the evidence based ideal Comparative Effectiveness Research demonstrates that dealing constructively with the vast uncertainties inherent to medical care requires policies to make the generation of high quality evidence an inseparable part of routine health care
