with disappointment it was not the step for which she waited None the less it paused at this house and she was startled to perceive a telegraph messenger on the point of knocking At once she hastened to the front door Mrs Quarrier inquired the boy holding out his missive Lilian drew back with it into the passage But there was not light enough to read by she had to enter the sitting room and hold the sheet of paper close to the kettle lamp Very sorry that I cannot get home before ten Unexpected business She read it carefully then turned with a sigh and dismissed the messenger In a quarter of an hour she had made tea and sat down to take a cup The cat refreshed after slumber jumped on to her lap and lay there pawing playfully at the trimming of her sleeves Lilian at first rewarded this friendliness only with absent stroking but when she had drunk her tea and eaten a slice of bread and butter the melancholy mood disperses We are delighted to publish this classic book as part of our extensive Classic Library collection Many of the books in our collection have been out of print for decades and therefore have not been accessible to the general public The aim of our publishing program is to facilitate rapid access to this vast reservoir of literature and our view is that this is a significant literary work which deserves to be brought back into print after many decades The contents of the vast majority of titles in the Classic Library have been scanned from the original works To ensure a high quality product each title has been meticulously hand curated by our staff Our philosophy has been guided by a desire to provide the reader with a book that is as close as possible to ownership of the original work We hope that you will enjoy this wonderful classic work and that for you it becomes an enriching experience
