Brief Presentation Summary:

This session will presented information on the current use of assessment centers and situational judgment tests for selecting supervisors and managers in the public sector. In September 2009 new "Guidelines and Ethical Considerations for Assessment Center Operations" were published in the International Journal of Selection and Assessment. Participants of this session received a copy of the new Guidelines and a presentation on the changes from the prior Guidelines. Several examples of efficient assessment center processes utilizing both live and video-based technologies were described. Also, many public agencies have begun using Situational Judgment Tests to select supervisors and managers for public safety and non-public safety jobs. These tests were also described as part of this session as will their relationship to assessment centers.

The following pages provide a more detailed summary of the information presented through this session.
