

Introduction

Neurons

Neurotransmitters

Neural Pathways

1

The neuron is the basic structural and functional unit of the nervous system. It is a specialized cell that receives information from other neurons or sensory receptors and transmits this information to other neurons or effector organs.

2

The cell body of a neuron contains the nucleus and other organelles. Dendrites are extensions of the cell body that receive information from other neurons or sensory receptors. The axon is a long, thin projection that carries the information away from the cell body.

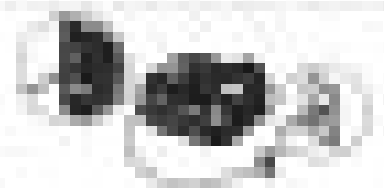

3

Neurotransmitters are chemical messengers that transmit information from one neuron to another. They are released from the axon terminal of a presynaptic neuron and bind to receptors on the postsynaptic neuron.

4

Neural pathways are the routes that information takes as it travels through the nervous system. They are formed by the connections between neurons and are responsible for the coordination of all bodily functions.

5

The nervous system is divided into the central nervous system (CNS) and the peripheral nervous system (PNS). The CNS consists of the brain and spinal cord, while the PNS consists of all other neurons and their axons.

6

The brain is the central control center of the nervous system. It receives information from the PNS and sends out instructions to the rest of the body.

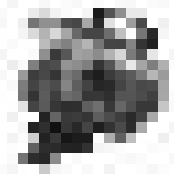

7

The spinal cord is a long, thin structure that runs down the back. It contains the cell bodies of many neurons and is responsible for transmitting information between the brain and the rest of the body.

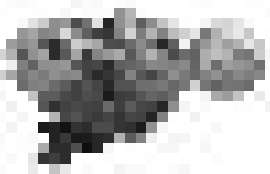

8

The peripheral nervous system (PNS) consists of all the neurons and their axons that are located outside the CNS. It is responsible for transmitting information between the CNS and the rest of the body.

9

The autonomic nervous system (ANS) is a part of the PNS that controls involuntary functions, such as heart rate, blood pressure, and digestion.

10

The somatic nervous system (SNS) is a part of the PNS that controls voluntary functions, such as movement and sensation.
