Cancer Care in Countries and Societies in Transition Michael Silberman, 2016-02-02 This is a rare compilation of clinically focused chapters on the practice of oncology in more than 25 countries and areas around the world that experience ongoing or intensifying ethnic religious and nationalistic conflict Each chapter is written by an internationally respected local physician or nurse Topics include the relationship between local culture and the local practice of mainstream modern medicine critical clinical issues faced by local physicians and options for when and how to incorporate palliative care The book ends with chapters on the United States current initiatives on promoting cancer care training in these regions and another on clinical concepts for Western clinicians undertaking oncology practice in emerging countries The audience includes oncologists around the world those practicing medicine in similarly extreme circumstances Western oncologists organizing or preparing for medical missions and Western oncologists who wish to learn from the experiences of oncologists who practice under radically different conditions

The British National Bibliography Arthur James Wells, 2009 Emergency Care and the Public's Health Jesse M. Pines, Jameel Abualenain, James Scott, Robert Shesser, 2014-03-27 As US health care systems undergo a period of transformative change so too will emergency care and more specifically emergency departments This transformation will include The development of new diagnostic therapeutic and information technologies A growing need to prepare and respond to emerging public health threats The expansion of the role of allied health professionals to address the workforce crisis Novel expectations for care coordination The fundamental economics of emergency care under new payment models and The key relationship with American law Emergency Care and the Public's Health explores the complex role of emergency care in the context of these changes and as an increasingly vital component of health care systems both within and outside the US From an expert emergency medicine team this new title is a reference for emergency care and critical care providers allied health professionals and hospital administrators It is also for relevant for public policy and healthcare policy professionals

Geospatial Approaches to Energy Balance and Breast Cancer David Berrigan, Nathan A. Berger, 2019-07-15 Cancer occurs in specific places and spaces each of which have identifiable geographic coordinates characterized by unique natural built and social characteristics all of which contribute significantly to cancer across the spectrum from etiology through diagnosis treatment and outcomes In the first volume of this series published in 2010 a single chapter was focused on these geographic influences Since then the field of geospatial studies of cancer prevention and control has exploded in approaches and applications Accordingly this volume focuses on what has now become a very specific research endeavor Geospatial Factors Impacting Breast Cancer The book provides important insights into this relatively new and rapidly developing field It should be of value to all students of the Energy Balance Cancer Series and a wide ranging introduction to problems in cancer prevention and control for geographers demographers and other researchers with a geospatial perspective Moreover it provides important information for all oncologists endocrinologists and behavioral modification professionals to better understand their patients in the context of their environment It should also provide important considerations for physicians scientists public health professionals and disparity investigator planning clinical trials community interventions and community planning

Dying in America Institute of Medicine, Committee on Approaching Death: Addressing Key End-of-Life Issues, 2015-03-19 For patients and their loved ones no care decisions are more profound than those made near the end of life Unfortunately the experience of dying in the United States is often characterized by fragmented care inadequate treatment of distressing symptoms frequent transitions among care settings and enormous care responsibilities for families According to this report the current health care system of rendering more intensive services than are necessary and desired by patients and the lack of coordination among programs increases risks to patients and creates avoidable burdens on them and their families Dying in America is a study of the current state of health care for persons of all ages who are nearing the end of life Death is not a strictly medical event Ideally health care for those nearing the end of life harmonizes with social psychological and spiritual support All people with advanced illnesses who may be approaching the end of life are entitled to access to high quality compassionate evidence based care consistent with their wishes Dying in America evaluates strategies to integrate care into a person and family centered team based framework and makes recommendations to create a system that coordinates care and supports and respects the choices of patients and their families The findings and recommendations of this report will address the needs of patients and their families and assist policy makers clinicians and their educational and credentialing bodies leaders of health care delivery and financing organizations researchers public and private funders religious and community leaders advocates of better care journalists and the public to provide the best care possible for people nearing the end of life
