

This anthology of Christian literature gathers together writings drawn from 2000 years of Christian history. Drawing on your knowledge of Christian thought as history, it offers students in one volume a rich and diverse selection of material. The text offers substantial introductions to each text, under discussion, along with study questions to assist immersion with texts. Each passage is embedded in the text offering more contextual information about the writer and their work.

The pieces included fall into three broad categories: works of literature specifically written to serve the needs of Christianity, such as prayers, liturgical works, and sermons; works of literature, such as stories and poems, which are not specific to the Christian faith, but which have been shaped or influenced by Christian ideas, values, images, and narratives; and works of literature which overlap with Christian ideas, including works of thought, or treatises, such as works by George Eliot and Thomas Hardy.

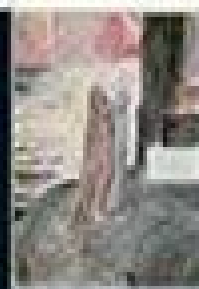

The anthology is primarily concerned with the Christian literature of the English language (including US English and Irish English), although it also includes material relating to the postcolonial period, especially writers in Greek, Latin, and Hebrew, and medieval and Renaissance works in Latin. Substantial sections of writings are included, rather than brief excerpts, to allow readers to really grasp the mood of the author's argument. The material is divided into two chronological sections according to the postcolonial period to the modern period, and within each section writers are also arranged chronologically. Consequently you have been able to ensure that the work meets departmental needs.
