Ecosystem Dynamics of the Boreal Forest : The

Kluane Project Vancouver Charles J. Krebs Professor of Zoology University of British Columbia, Edmonton Stan Boutin Professor of Zoology University of Alberta, Rudy Boonstra Professor of Physiology and Zoology University of Toronto, 2001-03-31 The boreal forest is one of the world's great ecosystems stretching across North America and Eurasia in an unbroken band and containing about 25% of the world's closed canopy forests The Kluane Boreal Forest Ecosystem Project was a 10 year study by nine of Canada's leading ecologists to unravel the impact of the snowshoe hare cycle on the plants and the other vertebrate species in the boreal forest In much of the boreal forest the snowshoe hare acts as a keystone herbivore fluctuating in 9-10 year cycles and dragging along secondary cycles in predators such as lynx and great horned owls By manipulating the ecosystem on a large scale from the bottom via fertilizer additions and from the top by predator exclosures they have traced the plant herbivore relationships and the predator prey relationships in this ecosystem to try to answer the question of what drives small mammal population cycles This study is unique in being large scale and experimental on a relatively simple ecosystem with the overall goal of defining what determines community structure in the boreal forest Ecosystem Dynamics of the Boreal Forest The Kluane Project summarizes these findings weaving new discoveries of the role of herbivores turned predators compensatory plant growth and predators eating predators with an ecological story rich in details and clear in its findings of a community where predation plays a key role in determining the fate of individuals and populations The study of the Kluane boreal forest raises key questions about the scale of conservation required for boreal forest communities and the many mammals and birds that live there

Report of the Auditor South Dakota. Auditor's Office, 1913

Carnivore Conservation John L. Gittleman, 2001-06-28 Carnivores are the focus of intense attention and resources in conservation biology It is often argued that because carnivores are at the top of the food chain if they are protected then other taxa will also be afforded adequate protection Carnivores are also charismatic and compete with humans for dwindling space and environmental resources In the past 10 years theoretical and empirical studies on carnivores have developed very quickly This volume reviews and summarises the current state of the field describes limitations and opportunities for carnivore conservation and offers a conceptual framework for future research and applied management As such it will be of interest to students and researchers of conservation biology mammalogy animal behaviour ecology and evolution
