Urban Land Acquisition and Involuntary Resettlement Vincent Roquet, Luciano Bornholdt, Karen Sirker, Jelena Lukic, 2017-03-01 Expansion and development of urban areas require acquisition of land which in turn often requires physical relocation of people who own or occupy this land Land acquisition and resettlement may also be required to improve the lives of the more than 1 billion people who currently live in slums around the world most of them in developing countries Therefore any effort to embark on significant sustainable urban development needs to ensure that there are adequate processes for land acquisition and so that resettlement does not become a constraint to much needed urban development Planners policy makers and social scientists can try to implement urban development programs in a way that make people who lose their land houses or livelihoods become equal partners in the development process The combination of the high price of urban land presence of creative individuals in close proximity in urban areas and the ability of urban space to generate innovative solutions can help convert urban resettlement into a development opportunity for all The report illustrates how urban resettlement can become a development opportunity The Mumbai example shows how the private sector can play a key role to unleash the potential created by high value land to provide sustainable housing solutions to those adversely affected at no cost to the government or the resettlers Examples from Morocco and Pakistan show how well designed and implemented citizen driven resettlement can result in enhanced skills and livelihoods and can promote overall sustainable urban development The Mauritania example demonstrates how collective approaches with strong community participation can help address difficult challenges related to housing The Brazil case shows how resettlement practices with demonstrated strongly positive outcomes and contributions to urban development can influence governments to incorporate them into their own laws and regulations helping millions of affected people to benefit from them
