States of America

Unanimous Declaration of the Thirteen united States of America

When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth a separate and equal station, it is their right, it is their duty, to declare the causes which impel them to the separation. We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, that whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its basis on such other Principles and organizing its Powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Liberty. Prudence in such a case, allows different Modes of Redress; and when a long train of Abuses and Misuses has connected together, leads to a Conviction that a complete Reformation of the Government is necessary, the People are obliged to acquiesce in a little more of their former Tolerances, in order to avoid the greater Evils of a total Dissolution of the Colonies. But when a long train of such Abuses and Misuses has produced a Form of Government, which is in every Way destructive of the Rights of the People, and the Pursuit of Happiness, it is their Duty to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its basis on such other Principles and organizing its Powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Liberty.
