CONSTITUTION & Declaration of Independence of the United States

The Constitution of the United States of America

We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do hereby establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

Article I

Section 1.

All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

Section 2.

The House of Representatives shall be composed of members chosen every second year by the people of the several states, and the electors in each state shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the state legislature.

No person shall be a Representative who shall not have attained to the age of twenty five years, and seven years shall be citizens of the United States, and when elected, he shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that state in which he shall be chosen.

Representatives and electors in each state shall be apportioned among the several states which may be included within this union, according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years, and including Indians not taxed, three fifths of all other persons. The actual Enumeration shall be made within three years after the first meeting of the Congress of the United States, and within every subsequent term of three years, in such manner as they shall by law direct. The number of Representatives shall not exceed one for every thirty thousand, but each state shall have at least one Representative, and until such enumeration shall be made, the state of New Hampshire shall be considered as one state, Massachusetts eight, Rhode Island and Providence Plantations three, Connecticut five, New York six, New Jersey four, Pennsylvania eight, Delaware six, Maryland six, Virginia ten, North Carolina five, South Carolina five, and Georgia three.

Before any representatives or electors in the Representatives of any state, the electors sufficiently qualified shall have taken an oath or taken to do so in duplicate.

The House of Representatives shall choose their speaker and other officers, and shall have the sole power of impeachment.

Section 3.

The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each state, chosen by the legislatures thereof, for six years; and each Senator shall have one vote.

Immediately after they shall be assembled in consequence of the first election, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes. The seats of the Senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, and of the third class at the expiration of the sixth year, so that one third may be chosen every second year; and whenever vacancies happen by resignation, or otherwise, during the term of the legislatures of any state, the executive thereof may make temporary appointments to such vacancies, pending the legislature, which shall then fill such vacancies.

No person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained to the age of thirty years, and seven years shall be citizens of the United States and when elected, he shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that state in which he shall be chosen.

The Vice President of the United States shall be President of the Senate, but shall never be vice, unless they be equally divided.

The Senate shall choose their other officers, and also a President pro tempore, in the absence of the Vice President, or when he shall exercise the office of President of the United States.

The Senate shall have the sole power to try all its members, before sitting to that purpose, they shall be on oath or affirmation. When the President of the United States is tried, the Chief Justice shall preside, and no person shall be a senator or elector in the impeachment of any branch of the members present.

Judgment in cases of impeachment shall not extend further than removal from office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust or profit under the United States; but the party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to civil process, trial, judgment and execution, according to law.

Section 4.

The times, places and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives, shall be prescribed in each state by the legislatures thereof, but the Congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations, except as to the places of choosing Senators.

The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by law appoint a different day.

Section 5.

Each House shall be the judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its own members, and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may by a majority vote suspend the attendance of absent members, in such manner, and under such penalties as each House may provide.

Each House may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two thirds, expel a member.

Each House shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and frequently to time publish the same, excepting parts touching its own judgment or private security; and the yeas and nays of the members of either House on any question shall, at the desire of one fifth of those present, be recorded on the journal.

Neither House, during the session of Congress, shall adjourn for more than three days, nor for any other place than that in which the two Houses shall be sitting.

Section 6.

The Senators and Representatives shall receive a compensation for their services, to be ascertained by law, and paid out of the treasury of the United States. They shall, during their absence from the service of the Senate, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the session of their respective Houses, and in going to and returning from the same, and their speech or debate in either House, they shall not be questioned in any other place.

No Senator or Representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time; and no person holding any office under the United States, shall be a member of either House during his continuance in office.

Section 7.

All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives, but the Senate may propose or concur with amendments as on other bills.

Every bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate, shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the President of the United States; if he approve he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his objections, to that House in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections on their journal, and preserve it according to the rules and regulations of that House; if that House shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be passed, together with the objections, to the other House, by which it shall then be reconsidered, and if approved by two thirds of that House, it shall become a law; but if all such members of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the yeas of the members of either House shall be recorded on the journal of each House respectively, if any bill shall not have received the President's signature within six days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law in the manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress by their adjournment prevent its entry, in which case it shall not be a law.

Every order, resolution, or vote to which the concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary (except on a question of adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the United States, and before the same shall take effect, shall be approved by him, or being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two thirds of the Senate and House of Representatives, according to the rules and limitations prescribed in the case of a bill.
